Brief History

PhilPapers started its journey from 2009 and PhilPapers receives financial support from other organizations, including a substantial grant from the Joint Information Systems Committee in the United Kingdom.

Scope and Coverage

PhilPapers is a comprehensive index and abstracting service of philosophical topics, maintained by the community of philosophers. It provides bibliographic information of philosophy related articles (published various journals). It covers near about 1,977,685 entries.

Kind of Information

This tool provides bibliographic information of philosophical articles. The bibliographic information includes title of the article, author(s) of article, name of the journal. It also includes page number, volume and issue number, publishing year of that article. Abstract, keywords, DOI are also present. Example is given below for understanding.

Obligations and prohibitions in Talmudic deontic logic

M. Abraham, D. M. Gabbay & U. Schild

Artificial Intelligence and Law 19 (2-3):117-148 (2011)

Abstract This paper examines the deontic logic of the Talmud. We shall find, by looking at examples, that at first approximation we need deontic logic with several connectives: O T A Talmudic obligation F T A Talmudic prohibition F D A Standard deontic prohibition O D A Standard deontic obligation. In classical logic one would have expected that deontic obligation O D is definable by $\$O_DA \text{ \textit{equiv} } F_D \text{ \textit{neg} } A\$$ and that O T and F T are connected by $\$O_TA \text{ \textit{equiv} } F_T \text{ \textit{neg} } A\$$. This is not the case in the Talmud for the T (Talmudic) operators, though it does hold for the D operators. We must change our underlying logic. We have to regard $\{O$ T , F T $\}$ and $\{O$ D , F D $\}$ as two sets of operators, where O T and F T are independent of one another and where we have some connections between the two sets. We shall list the types of obligation patterns appearing in the Talmud and develop an intuitionistic deontic logic to accommodate them. We shall compare Talmudic deontic logic with modern deontic logic
