BIOGRAPHY

Born in Philadelphia, where he attended evening classes at the Academy while working as an apprentice draughtsman for a local publisher. In 1870 he began a long association with the New York publishers, Harper's, who sent him to England in 1878 to research an illustrated edition of Herrick's poems. After two years in Europe he returned briefly to America, then finally settled in England, marrying in 1880 and establishing himself at Morgan Hall, Fairford, the following year. Having made his name with his illustrations and watercolours, exhibiting at the RI from 1883-87 and the RSW from 1893-96, he began to paint seriously in oils in 1889 and soon conquered the RA with such dramatic historical and literary works as "Richard, Duke of York, and the Lady Anne" (Yale), the "picture of the year" of 1896, and the magnificent
