The encyclopedia in its content includes different categories of articles, like, creationism, Logic, pseudoscience, Religion, Science, Culture, Ufology, etc.

Kind of Information	RW is a fairly popular site, especially among online skeptical resources. According to its website RW has a serious mission to make a volunteer project where the articles are maintained high quality and here users can read as well as write those articles. Most of the articles have good length and have treated article on a particular concept very well. Like an article "Brain" provides information on basic anatomy of the human brain, Brain size and intelligence, Evolution of the human brain, unused part of the brain, concept on the brain and modern toys, etc. Articles also include images; see also terms, related external links. At the end references are also included. Another article "Religion" gives information like definition, identification of religion, history of religion in the world, religion and science relation. See also terms, external links, references are also included at the end.
Special Features	 By encouraging original research and essays, RW has also incorporated many aspects of the blogging community. Discussion among members is facilitated on many levels such as debate articles, specific discussions on talk pages, and just coming together to talk about whatever is on our minds at the Saloon Bar.
Arrangement Pattern	There is no particular arrangement in categories. But the articles are arranged alphabetically under each category.
Remarks	RW is not only an encyclopedia. RW articles go much further than encyclopedia– it encourages original research and opinion formation. The community has embraced the concept of wikis by creating an information source out of the collaborative editing of thousands of people.
