Brief History

The Cincinnati Enquirer is a morning daily newspaper published by Gannett Company in Cincinnati, Ohio, United States. First published in 1841, the Enquirer is the last remaining daily newspaper in Greater Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky, although the daily Journal-News competes with the Enquirer in the northern suburbs.

The Enquirer launched its first website, Enquirer.com, on November 1, 1996. Due to a joint operating agreement with The Cincinnati Post, it launched concurrently with the Post's site, @The Post. A shared website, GoCincinnati, located at gocinci.net, displayed classified advertising and offered dial-up Internet access subscriptions. Local access numbers were available in cities throughout the country through a network of Gannett publications. Both papers' home pages moved to a more memorable domain, Cincinnati.com, on November 1, 1998.

From May 2002 to March 2007, Cincinnati.com also included WCPO.com, the website of Post sister company WCPO-TV. The Post closed at the end of 2007, ending Scripps' involvement in Cincinnati.com.

In August 2006, Cincinnati.com launched 186 community pages covering towns and neighborhoods in Ohio and Indiana and began soliciting and publishing stories and articles from readers.

- ❖ There is a search bar where simple and advanced search can be possible

The screenshot shows a search interface with a main search bar labeled "Search" containing the text "Enter your search". To the right of the search bar is a "Hide advanced" dropdown menu, a magnifying glass icon, and a question mark icon. Below the main search bar are two filter boxes: "Place" with the text "Enter a location name (country, state, or city)" and "Date" with the text "Enter a date or range (year, month-year, or day-month-year)". A blue "Search" button is located at the bottom right of the filter section.

Arrangement Pattern There are two categories, i.e. Paper Name and New & Updated by which newspaper archives can be found, under each category newspapers are alphabetically arranged. As for example,

Paper name	New & updated
 Bethel Journal Bethel, Ohio 2012–2016 3,415 pages	 The Cincinnati Enquirer Cincinnati, Ohio 1841–2016 4,380,370 pages
