Scope and Coverage

With over 6 million newspapers, Historic Newspapers own a unique archive of original newspapers dating back over two hundred years. Some of these are extremely rare and cover such news events as Trafalgar, Waterloo, the gruesome coverage of Jack the Ripper, famous battles, and more recently Lunar Landings and 9-11.

The archive has been built over many years from various sources: initially from the newspaper group's original archives as they moved out of Fleet Street in the 80s, and continues today, as virtually all the national Scottish and English newspaper titles send to Historic Newspapers their daily editions. Papers are also continually being sourced from libraries and other collections from all over the world.

Kind of Information

Historic Newspapers provides different categories of newspaper archives, these are as follows –
